The Register Office offers appointments for the registration of births and deaths, and for legal notice appointments.

By law you have to give a notice of marriage, which is a formal declaration of your intention to marry. You are both required to give a notice of marriage and there is a standard fee for this. You must give notice at the Register Office in the Registration District where you have lived for seven days immediately prior to giving the notice.

Spark & Story

Meet John - As for my filming style, it's all about being laid-back and discreet. I aim to blend into the background while still capturing the genuine essence of your special moments. But, of course, a good laugh is always on the menu to keep things relaxed.

I'm genuinely invested in your story and the unfolding of your plans

I'm an award winning celebrant based in the beautiful market town of Abergavenny in South Wales with my husband. My ceremonies are relaxed and informal with your personal story at the very heart. I enjoy finding ways to involve your family and friends in the ceremony, finding ways for them to share their love and support for you so they feel part of the day rather than just sitting there listening to words they have heard many times before.
